10:00 AM, The Hurricane 100 Room

The Office of Civic and Community Engagement will host a panel discussion to commemorate the 50th anniversary of the Miami-Dade County’s Community Relations Board (CRB) and to support a new generation of civic leaders. This moderated dialogue will feature Dr. Raymond Mohl, an historian from the University of Alabama-Birmingham and expert on race and ethnicity in Miami, as well as prominent local community leaders including Rabbi Solomon Schiff, Dr. Dorothy Fields, Rev. Dr. Walter Richardson, and student leader Tiffany Ford from UM’s United Black Students.

Those in attendance will learn from the past as CRB members reflect on former activists who played an instrumental role in reversing racial tensions and fostering mutual collaborations between diverse ethnic groups in South Florida. Panelists will offer guidance to those who want to be involved in improving their communities and are unsure of where to begin. Panelists will also provide students with invaluable insights that will help them achieve their goal of creating positive social change and becoming more effective leaders in their communities.

Due to limited space, RSVPs are required.
