ACCESSING SERVICES

Personal crises. "Personal crises are not made in a vacuum. They happen when someone is not noticed. And conflictual situations are the result of external pressures. Appointments and services are provided to ensure that counseling is available. Services are provided at no cost to employees, families, and their dependent children. These services include personal counseling, family counseling, and group counseling.

FREE & CONFIDENTIAL

Resources. "Fundamental to the success of this program is the provision of confidential, free, and confidential counseling services. These services are provided to employees, families, and their dependent children. The FSAP (Faculty and Staff Assistance Program) provides free and confidential support and resources to help employees and their families. The FSAP is staffed by professional counselors who can assist employees with their personal, family, and financial concerns.

LOCATIONS & STAFF

The FSAP has offices on both the Miller-Miller campus and the Miller-Miller School and Central Campus. The FSAP provides specialized resources for specialized situations. Making referrals to community and university resources for specialized situations is a priority. If you call and do not reach us, please leave a message and we will return your call as soon as possible.

HOW FSAP HELPS

Faculty, staff, and students who experience stress, mood, or emotional difficulties, interpersonal difficulties, workplace issues, or issues commonly addressed by the FSAP, and family and relationship problems, can contact the FSAP for assistance.
